TEAMSTERS ON STRIKE

Chicago Lumbermen Refused a 50 Cent Increase.

Industry at a Standstill—President Donnelly Accuses Packers of Having Tried to Buy His Influence

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Nine hundred lumber teamsters struck today, shutting off the output from 100 lumber yards in Chicago.

Every lumberyard in Chicago of any importance in the industry is tied up today.

FURTHERMORE, 300 PLANING MILL EMPLOYEES HAVE VOTED TO REJECT A NEW AGREEMENT OFFERED BY THE LUMBERMEN'S ASSOCIATION, PRACTICALLY PROVIDING FOR THE "OPEN SHOP."

A strike is impending which may further complicate the lumber industry.

Teamsters Tied Up.

No attempts have been made by the managers of the lumberyards to send out wagons manned by non-union drivers.

The teamsters are demanding an increase in wages of 50 cents a week.

for drivers of two-horse wagons. The present scale is $12 a week for single wagons and $13.50 for teams. The men have to care for the horses on Sunday without extra pay.

A LOCKOUT OF CARRIAGE AND WAGON MAKERS IS ANOTHER POSSIBILITY OF THE WEEK.

President Donnelly, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen, has issued his first statement to be published since the close of the great stockyards strike last fall.

HE ACCUSES THE PACKERS OF HAVING ATTEMPTED TO BRIBE HIM, ALTHOUGH HE MENTIONS NO NAMES.

HE ALSO DECLARES THE PACKERS HAVE IMPOSED ADDITIONAL HANDS ON THE WORKERS' DISCRIMINATING AGAINST UNION MEN AND LABOR LEADERS.

PUTNAM COUNTY FOR SALARY BILL

Farmers' Institute Expresses Itself Freely on Matters Political.

Allen O. Myers Scores Dishonest Legislators—President Roosevelt's Railroad Policy Endorsed by Democratic Party.

Columbus Grove, O., Jan. 31.—Allen O. Myers, once prominent in the rank of the Democratic party, erstwhile newspaper man, now living on a farm near Worthington, O., address the Independent Farmers' Institute, held in Ottawa, stated that Democratic legislators were made up of money-changers and were a set of dishonest and bribetaking men. He said Putnam county had been sending up representatives unfit to be voted for by any decent man. As long as the Democratic party continued to be made up of this kind of fellows,

Myers said, he hoped to God they never would be successful.

Although his audience was made up largely of Democrats, in this rock-ribbed old Democratic district, Myers was vociferously applauded. He lauded President Roosevelt on his attitude toward the railroad corporations and said he believed it had been given to him to strike the first blow in the cause for humanity. He stated

Roosevelt was a good and an honest man, and that his efforts would redound to the good of all the people, not as a Republican, nor as a Democrat, but as a representative of all the people.

The institute adopted resolutions urging the extension of the rural free delivery system, the establishment and adoption of postal banks, parcel post and postal currency. President

Roosevelt was heartily endorsed on the railroad rebate question.

The passage of a law giving a definition salary to county officials of the state in accordance with the amount of business transacted or of population, taxing the excess fees into the treasury of each county, was urged and the teaching of agriculture, at least in one county high school was advocated. The institute favored prohibiting the selling of quail and rabbits for a period of two years.

Wilton Kline, of Gibson, was elected president for the ensuing year; William

Vanner, of Greenfield, township vice president; J. T. Maslow, of Ottawa, secretary and treasurer.

L. W. Butler, of Ottawa, David

Weaver, of Gibson, and D. W. Light, of Columbus Grove, members of the executive committee. President L.

W. Butler retired after serving for the past eight years.

"He is the Man," Said Miss Mabel Packer

The court room has been busily packed with people during the sitting of court today. The interest is in the case of Ed. B. Miller, who with the Lees when arrested at Dunkirk about Oct. 14, charged with burglary, says the Kanton Democrat.

GROWING UP
There's something the matter with the child that fails to grow up. A child that grows up too much, however, without proper filling out of flesh, is almost as badly off. Nothing will help these pale, thin "weedy" children like Scott's Emulsion. It supplies the rounding out of flesh and the rich inward nourishment of blood and vital organs which insures rapid growth a healthy and uniform development.

country or did robbing and burglarizing in the town.

The room of Miss Mabel Packer, a popular and most highly esteemed school teacher of that place was entered at night. There was a window in the room and Miss Packer's bed was before this window, the burglar to gain entrance came through this window and crawled over the bed. The criminal then tried to intimidate the lady, and threatened her with a knife held at her breast.

To Miss Packer testified in court and when asked whether or not she could identify the burglar and other questions, she raised up and pointed to Miller saying, "He is the man." At this the prisoner, who is short, with sandy mustache, blue eyes and dark hair, flushed and looked worried.

Miss Packer proved a good witness for the state. Other witnesses examined by the prosecution were Mr. Neff, who found the burglar's knife which was stuck in the window case to hold the window up and which the state will seek to prove was Miller's; Mayor Desmet of Dunkirk, who preserved the scent of the burglar's tracks and who knows considerable about the case; editor King-bury who also is familiar with the case; and Mrs. Lewis, who lives in a house adjoining the Packer house and who testified to a lamp's burning in her room, the reflected light from which enabled Miss Packer, so the latter says to more closely see the burglar's features.

The prosecution will also bring the bloodhounds into the case and let their work be evidence that they have the right man. In all there will be 40 witnesses.

was about to add something, but checked himself.

"To sum up," he continued hurriedly, "we may have to remain here for many days, even months. There is always a chance of speedy help. We must act, however, on the basis of detention for an indefinite period. I am discussing appearances as they are. A survey of the island may change all these views."

"In what way?"

He turned and pointed to the summit of the tree covered hill behind them.

"From that point," he said, "we may see other and larger islands. If so, they will certainly be inhabited. I am surprised this one is not."

He ended abruptly. They were looking time. Before Iris could join him, he was already handling a large undamaged case out of the water.

He laughed unthinkingly. "Champagne!" he said. "A good brand too!"

This man was certainly an enigma. Iris wrinkled her pretty forehead in the effort to place him in a fitting category. His words and accent were those of an educated gentleman, yet his actions and manners were studiously unorthodox when he thought she was observing him. The veneer of roughness puzzled her. That he was naturally of refined temperament she knew quite well, not alone by perception, but by the plain evidence of his earlier dealings with her.

To the best of her ability she silently helped in the work of salvage. They made a queer collection. A case of champagne and another of brandy, a box of books, a pair of night glasses, a compass, several boxes of ship's biscuits, coated with salt, but saved by their hardness, having been immersed but a few seconds; two heavy cases of hams in equally good condition, some huge duck breasts, a bit of twisted iron-work and a great quantity of cordage and lumber.

There was one very heavy package, which their united strength could not lift. The sailor searched around until he found an iron bar that could be wedged from its socket. With this he pried open the strong outer cover and revealed the contents—regulation boxes of ammunition, each containing 500 rounds.

"Ah!" he cried. "Now we want some rifles."

"What good would they be?" inquired Iris.

He softly denounced himself as a fool, but he answered at once: "To shoot birds, of course, Miss Deane. There are plenty here, and many of them are edible."

They worked in silence for another hour. The sun was nearing the zenith. They were distressed with the increasing heat of the day. Jenks secured a ham and some biscuits, some pieces of driftwood and the binoculars and invited Miss Deane to accompany him to the grove. She obeyed without a word, though she wondered how he proposed to light a fire. To contribute something toward the expected feast she picked up a dish cover and a bottle of champagne.

The sailor eyed the concluding item with disfavor. "Not while the sun is up," he said. "In the evening, yes."

"It was for you," explained Iris coldly. "I do not drink wine."

"You must break the pledge while you are here, Miss Deane. It is often

She covertly watched his preparations. He had laid from a note-book and broke the bullet out of a cartridge, dumping the powder with water from a gull's wing. Shearing the composition of the paper, he placed it in the sun, where it dried at once. He gathered a small bundle of withered spines from the palms and arranged the driftwood on top, causing a place for his bottle just within the shade. Then inserting the touch paper among the spines he mislabeled one of the lenses of the binoculars, converted it into a burning glass and had a blue blaze roaring merrily in a few minutes. With the aid of polished sticks he grilled some slices of ham, cut with his clasp knife, which he first carefully cleaned in the earth. The biscuits were of the variety that had come soft when toasted, and he balanced a few by stones near the fire.

Iris forgot her annoyance in her interest. A most appetizing smell filled the air. They were having a picnic amidst delightful surroundings. Yesterday at this time—she almost yielded to a rush of sentiment, but forced it back with instant determination. There were a poor resource, mindful of God's goodness to herself and her companion. Without the sailor, what would have become of her, even were she thrown ashore while still living? She knew none of the expedients which seemed to be at his command.

"Can I do nothing to help?" she exclaimed. So contrite was her tone that Jenks was astonished.

"Yes," he said, pointing to the dish cover. "If you polish the top of that with your sleeve it will serve as a plate. Luncheon is ready."

He neatly sliced up two slices of ham on a couple of biscuits and handed them to her with the clasp knife.

"I can depend on my fingers," he explained. "It will not be the first time."

"Have you led an adventurous life?" she asked, by way of polite conversation.

"No," he growled.

"I only thought so because you appear to know all sorts of dodges for prolonging existence—things I never heard of."

"Breaded ham—and biscuits—for instance."

At another time Iris would have sniggered at him for the remark. Still humbly respectful for her previous attitude, she answered meekly:

"Yes, in this manner of cooking them, I mean. But there are other items—methods of lighting fires, finding water, knowing what fruits and other articles may be found on a desert island, such as plantains and coconuts and certain sorts of birds."

When the meal was ended Jenks sprang lightly to his feet. Red and foot had restored his faculties. The girl thought dreamily, as he stood there in his rough attire, that she had never seen a finer man. He was tall, sinewy and well formed. In repose his face was pleasant, if masterful. Its somewhat sullen, self contained expression was occasional and acquired. She wondered how he could be so energetic. Personally she was consumed with sleepiness.

He produced a revolver.

"Do you mind if I fire a shot to test these cartridges?" he inquired. "The powder is all right, but the fulminate in the caps may be damaged."

She agreed promptly. He pointed the weapon at a cluster of coconuts, and there was a loud report. Two nuts fell to the ground, and the air was filled with shrill screams and the flapping of innumerable wings. Iris was momentarily disarmed, but her senses confirmed the sailor's explanation—"See birds."

"Can you use a revolver?" he asked. "My father taught me. He thinks every woman should know how to defend herself if need be."

"Excellent. Well, Miss Deane you must try to sleep for a couple of hours. I purpose exploring the coast for some distance on each side. Should you want me, a shot will be the best sort of signal."

"I am very tired," she admitted.

"But you?"

"Oh, I am all right! I feel restless—that is, I mean I will not be able to sleep until night comes, and before we climb the hill to survey our domain I was about to add something, but checked himself.

Perhaps were she less fatigued she would have asked the same anxiety, the note of distrust in his voice. But the impact of sand and leaves on which she lay was very seductive. Her eyes closed. She nestled into a comfortable position and slept.

After an hour the revolver out of harm's way to a spot where she must see it instantly pulled his sou'wester well over his eyes and walked off quietly.

They were flung ashore on the north-west side of the island. Except for the cave formed by the coral reef, with its mysterious palm tree growing apparently in the midst of the waves, the shore of the coast was roughly that of the concrete side of a bow, the two visible extremities being about three-quarters of a mile apart.

He crossed by the way in which the sea saved past these points that the land did not extend beyond them. Behind him it rose steeply to a considerable height, 150 or 200 feet. In the center was the tallest hill, which seemed to end abruptly toward the southwest. On the northeast side it was connected with a rocky promontory by a ridge of easy grade. The sailor turned to the southwest as offering the most likely direction for rapid survey.

He was not surprised to find that the hill terminated in a sheer wall of rock, which stood out, ominous and massive, from the wealth of verdure clothing the remainder of the ridge. Facing the precipice and separated from it by a strip of ground not twenty feet above the sea level in the highest part was another rock built eminence quite bare of trees, blackened by the weather and scarred in a manner that attested the attacks of lightning.

The intervening belt was sparsely dotted with trees, casuarinas, pines and other woods he did not know, resembling ebony and cedar. A number of stumps showed that the ax had been at work, but not recently. He passed into the cleft and climbed a tree that offered easy access. As he expected, after rising a few feet from the ground his eyes encountered the solemn blue line of the sea, not half a mile distant.

He descended and commenced a systematic search. Men had been here. Was there a house? Would he suddenly encounter some hermit Malay or Chinaman?

At the foot of the main cliff was a cluster of fruit bearing trees—plantains, area nuts and coconuts. A couple of cinchona caught his eye. One spot the undergrowth was rank and vividly green. The coconuts, or saplings, reared their high passion flower leaves above the grass, and some saeco palms thrust aloft their thick scummed trunks.

"Here is a change of menu, at any rate," he murmured.

Breaking a thick branch off a palm tree, he whittled away the minor stems. A strong stick was useful to explore that leafy fastness thoroughly.

A few cautious strides and vigorous wrenches with the stick laid bare the cause of such prodigality in a soil covered with drifted sand and lumps of black and white speckled coral. The trees and bushes enclosed a well-secured, in fact, from being choked with sand during the first gale that blew.

Delighted with this discovery, more precious than diamonds at the moment—for he doubted the advisability of existing on the water supply of the pitcher plant—he knelt to peer into the excavation. The well had been properly made. Ten feet down he could see the reflection of his face. Expert hands had tapped the secret reservoir of the island. By stretching to the full extent of his arm he managed to plunge the stick into the water. Tasting the drops, he found that they were quite sweet. The sand and porous rock provided the best of filter beds.

He rose, well pleased, and noted that on the opposite side the appearance of the shrubs and tufts of long grass indicated the existence of a grown over path toward the cliff. He followed it, walking carefully, with eyes seeking the prospect beyond, when something rattled and cracked beneath his feet. Looking down, he was horrified to find he was trampling on a skeleton.

Had a venomous snake coiled its glistening folds around his leg he would not have been more startled. But this man of iron nerve soon recovered. He frowned deeply after the first involuntary heart throb.

With the stick he cleared away the undergrowth and revealed the skeleton of a man. The bones were big and strong, but oxidized by the action of the air. Jenks had injured the left tibia by his tread, but three fractured ribs and a smashed shoulder blade told some terrible unwritten story.

Beneath the mournful relics were

AMUSEMENTS

Stetson's big production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will appear at the Faust opera house on Thursday night. It has been organized this season in a manner that will make it far superior to any previous production ever seen here. Special attention has been given to the staging of the piece and the scenery faithfully portrays several scenes of southern life during ante-bellum days in the far South. A large number of genuine colored people, who introduce cake walks, buck and wing dancing, Southern jubilee singing and funny scenes in the cotton fields, add materially to the production. Misses Kitty Morgan and Bertha Crosby are the two Topsyes; Mosses, George Harris and Nick Olin are the two Marks, and Stetson's original "Uncle Tom," Mr. Fred Bennett, will also be in the cast. Of late years the stage has been deluged with so many cheap "Uncle Tom" companies that the public has been led to regard an announcement of its production with a great deal of distrust. Mr. Kibbe, the manager of this company, has, however, succeeded in organizing a cast composed of specially selected players, chosen for their adaptability for the parts assigned them and has received his reward in the generous patronage of the public and praise from the press. It is doubtful if "Uncle Tom" ever won a novelty and new to the stage, ever received the attention so lavishly bestowed upon it as now during this stupendous revival. A street parade will be given that is said to delight every juvenile spectator beyond measure. In fact, the entire show is an entertainment that any child may be permitted to see and enjoy.

When you feel a sense of weight and oppression after meals it means indigestion. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea positively cures indigestion, constipation and stomach troubles. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets, H. P. Vorkamp.

The DAILY NEWS carries a greater number of ads in its want column than the other two daily papers combined. Can't you guess why?

TO PLEASE THE WOMEN

The Pittsburg Dispatch Has Added a New Section to Its Wonderful Sunday Edition.

The Pittsburg Dispatch has beyond all doubt solved the problem of pleasing the women. Commencing Sunday February 5th The Dispatch will increase the size of the paper by adding an entirely new six-page 42-column section, which will delight the hundreds of thousands of women who read that paper and which, if possible, will make it more popular than ever. It is by far the most pretentious women's section ever incorporated into a Sunday newspaper. Expense has been a secondary consideration with The Dispatch, its one purpose being to furnish something that will be just what women like. The Dispatch has succeeded in doing this and the large increase in its circulation which is bound to result from the new section will evidence its success. Those who secure a copy of next Sunday's edition can judge for themselves, for it is not possible to give a fair idea of the delightful, entertaining features which will make up The Dispatch's New Woman's section.

ENGLAND IS INDIGNANT

Cossacks Attacked British Consul-General.

Vice Consul Badly Hurt—Posting of Defamatory Telegrams in Russian Cities—Situation is Strained.

London, Jan. 31.—The foreign office today confirmed the report of an attack on British Consul General Murray and Vice-Consul Muchnikoff by Cossacks at Warsaw.

The foreign office, in its announcement of the affair, says the officials were charged by cavalry, who were clearing the streets. Consul General Murray, who suffers from partial deafness, probably did not hear the approach of the cavalry but afterwards tried to make his personality known. His protests were of no avail.

Ambassador Hardinge at St. Petersburg has been instructed to make an urgent protest against the indignity of the czar's government.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 31.—Placards have been posted at Livan, signed by the governor of the province, charging that British gold has fomented strike. Singular placards have appeared at Moscow.

British Ambassador Hardinge has protested to the government against the placards.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 31.—1.50 p. m.—Now complications between Great Britain and Russia are feared on account of the attack of the British consul and vice-consul at Warsaw.

Saturday night, coming on the heels of the placards posted by Assistant Police Chief Roudneff at Moscow, charging Great Britain with inciting the revolution in Russia, the Warsaw incident is likely to arouse an outburst in Great Britain which may again strain relations between the two countries.

Vice Consul in Hospital.

Beyond the fact of the attack at Warsaw resulting in the wounding of the British vice-consul who is now in a hospital, the British embassy here has no details of the affair, but Sir George Hardinge, the British ambassador has already delivered a note to Foreign Minister Hamsdorff asking for an immediate investigation and explanation, reserving any claim which may hereafter be made, and at the same time asking for the protection of British consuls throughout the empire. By the first train he also dispatched Major Napier, the British military attaché, to Warsaw to secure a full report of the circumstances.

Count Lamsdorff replied to Ambassador Hardinge's second note on the subject of the Moscow placards by saying instructions had been sent to remove all traces of placards from the streets. It is now learned, however, that similar notices have been posted at Livan and Rivan, which has led to a renewal of preparations on this score.

Synod Aids to Flames.

In this connection the appearance of the proclamation of the holy synod instructing the orthodox priests to inform their parishioners that the strike and revolutionary movements were promoted by the external as well as internal enemies of Russia with the object of embarrassing the military and civil plans has created something of a hurry among foreigners here, especially the British who have been taken by either Ambassador Hardinge or other foreign representatives.

No further action, however, has been taken by either Ambassador Hardinge or other foreign representatives.

Private advices from Warsaw state that the authorities here have already taken over charge of the water-works, electric light and gas plants, and that serious trouble is anticipated.

DROWN ALL THE IDIOTS

Physician says It Would Benefit Human Race.

No Cure for Unfortunates—Weak-Minded Children Can Be Benefited by Special Instructions in School.

New York, Jan. 31.—"Idiot children should be put in a dog pound and drowned."

This is the disposition that would be made of unfortunate human beings if Dr. Brown of the Board of Health had his say. In explaining the system of classification recently adopted by the school board for the disposal of backward children, Dr. Brown made this statement Saturday.

"Every child with the slightest deficiency receives a special examination, and if he be blind or deaf he is sent to an institution where that deficiency is given special attention, and possibly cured. In like manner an imbecile is often made into a useful citizen. But for an idiot there is absolutely no hope. When it is found that he is too far gone for the surgeon's knife to help, his life had better be extinguished."

No Time for Idiot Children.

"Idiot children should be drowned. We have more time and energy to spend on children in whom there are the possibilities of success."

"For imbeciles who have less mental depravity and the weak minded pupils we have training classes. In these a great deal of mental work is taught, and the boys are trained to be expert carpenters, while the girls learn to cook and to sew."

"In another class we teach the 'slow.' This is called the coaching class. Boys and girls in these classes often make the best students and the biggest successes in later years, but they are for some reason slow of comprehension. By separating them from their classmates the normal children are allowed to go ahead and learn as fast as they please."

"Then, there is the unity, lazy pupils who are put in the disciplinary class. There are great hopes for him when he wakes up and sees the useless trouble he has caused. Nevertheless, his place is not with the real student, whose ambition is to lead his class."

Special Reports Every Month.

"Already we have these various classes in 17 schools. Every month the pupils are examined and new reports made of each."

"It is a noticeable fact that the deficiency among the poor children who are placed in the backward class is due to a dullness which is often brought on by drinking beer and coffee. With wealthy children, whose trouble is often due to a high strung mental condition, coffee has exactly the opposite effect and instead of dulling their senses makes them nervous wrecks."

Physical Tests for Weaknesses.

"Besides this mental test, a physical test also made. A great deal can be told about a child by the shape of his ears and the formation of his mouth, his palate, and his tongue. Almost any child that keeps the lower jaw dropped, and tongue hanging out, and eyes half closed, is weak minded. Then, to the child who, instead of partaking in the games at recess, hangs off by himself in a corner, is abnormal and can bear watching, and is generally a fit candidate for the backward class."

The little who sits on the bean, very cold at night in this latitude. A child would mean fever and perhaps death.
